

Music, the Universal Language

1. What music do you have on your playlist? How did you discover your music?
2. Does your mood determine what music you will listen to or do you listen to music to change your mood? Explain and give an example.
3. “Do any of us really know what music is? Is it merely physics? Mathematics? The stuff of romance, or of commerce? Why is it so important to us? What is its essence?” —Sting
How would you answer the last two questions of this quotation?
4. In the painting, we see two people involved in making music by playing a guitar and singing.
How do you make music: impromptu or planned and practiced?
Would you like to develop your ability to sing or learn to play an instrument?
Would you rather play music solo or be a part of a group?

Music, the Universal Language

1. What music do you have on your playlist? How did you discover your music?
2. Does your mood determine what music you will listen to or do you listen to music to change your mood? Explain and give an example.
3. “Do any of us really know what music is? Is it merely physics? Mathematics? The stuff of romance, or of commerce? Why is it so important to us? What is its essence?” —Sting
How would you answer the last two questions of this quotation?
4. In the painting, we see two people involved in making music by playing a guitar and singing.
How do you make music: impromptu or planned and practiced?
Would you like to develop your ability to sing or learn to play an instrument?
Would you rather play music solo or be a part of a group?

Jose Ferraz de Almeida Junior. The Guitar Player, c. 1899. Oil on canvas, 141x 172 cm.
Pinacoteca do Estado de São Paulo, São Paulo, Brazil

Jose Ferraz de Almeida Junior. The Guitar Player, c. 1899. Oil on canvas, 141x 172 cm.
Pinacoteca do Estado de São Paulo, São Paulo, Brazil

Jose Ferraz de Almeida Junior. The Guitar Player, c. 1899. Oil on canvas, 141x 172 cm.
Pinacoteca do Estado de São Paulo, São Paulo, Brazil

Jose Ferraz de Almeida Junior. The Guitar Player, c. 1899. Oil on canvas, 141x 172 cm.
Pinacoteca do Estado de São Paulo, São Paulo, Brazil

Music, the Universal Language

1. What music do you have on your playlist? How did you discover your music?
2. Does your mood determine what music you will listen to or do you listen to music to change your mood? Explain and give an example.
3. “Do any of us really know what music is? Is it merely physics? Mathematics? The stuff of romance, or of commerce? Why is it so important to us? What is its essence?” —Sting
How would you answer the last two questions of this quotation?
4. In the painting, we see two people involved in making music by playing a guitar and singing.
How do you make music: impromptu or planned and practiced?
Would you like to develop your ability to sing or learn to play an instrument?
Would you rather play music solo or be a part of a group?

Music, the Universal Language

1. What music do you have on your playlist? How did you discover your music?
2. Does your mood determine what music you will listen to or do you listen to music to change your mood? Explain and give an example.
3. “Do any of us really know what music is? Is it merely physics? Mathematics? The stuff of romance, or of commerce? Why is it so important to us? What is its essence?” —Sting
How would you answer the last two questions of this quotation?
4. In the painting, we see two people involved in making music by playing a guitar and singing.
How do you make music: impromptu or planned and practiced?
Would you like to develop your ability to sing or learn to play an instrument?
Would you rather play music solo or be a part of a group?